28. ἅπαντες γὰρ ὑμεῖς.

baptism had become so definitely fixed at this early date, that such an allusion would speak for itself. The metaphor in fact is very common in the LXX, e.g. Job viii. 22 (αἰσχύνην), xxix. 14 (δικαιοσύνην), xxxix. 19 (φόβον), Ps. xxxiv. 26 (αἰσχύνην καὶ ἐντροπήν), xcii. 1 (εὐπρέπειαν, δύναμιν), ciii. 1, etc.; comp. ἐγκομβοῦσθαι 1 Pet. v. 5. See also Schöttgen on Rom. xiii. 14. On the other hand in the context of the passage of Justin quoted below (ver. 28) there is apparently an allusion to the baptismal robes.

28, 29. 'In Christ ye are all sons, all free. Every barrier is swept away. No special claims, no special disabilities exist in Him, none can exist. The conventional distinctions of religious caste or of social rank, even the natural distinction of sex, are banished hence. One heart beats in all: one mind guides all: one life is lived by all. Ye are all one man, for ye are members of Christ. And as members of Christ ye are Abraham's seed, ye claim the inheritance by virtue of a promise, which no law can set aside.'

οὐκ ἐνι] 'there is no room for, no place for,' negating not the fact only, but the possibility, as James i. 17 παρ' ᾧ οὐκ ἐνι παραλλαγῇ. The right account of ἐνι seems to be given by Winer § xiv. p. 96. It is not a contraction of ἔνεστι, but the preposition ἐν, ἐνί, strengthened by a more vigorous accent, like ἐπι, πάρα, and used with an ellipsis of the substantive verb.

Ἑλλην] See the note ii. 3.

ἄρσεν καὶ θῆλυ] The connecting particle is perhaps changed in the third clause, because the distinction now mentioned is different in kind, no longer social but physical. There may be an allusion to Gen. i. 27 ἄρσεν καὶ θῆλυ ἐποίησεν αὐτούς, and if so, this clause will form a climax: 'even the primeval distinction of sex has ceased.' Comp. Col. iii. 11.

Either on this passage, or on some unrecorded saying of our Lord similar in import (comp. Luke xx. 35), may have been founded the mystical language attributed to our Lord in the apocryphal Gospel of the Egyptians (Clem. Alex. Strom. iii. p. 553, ed. Potter). Being asked by Salome when His kingdom should come, He is reported to have answered, 'When the two shall be one, and the male with the female, neither male nor female.' These obscure words were much discussed in early times and diversely interpreted, e.g. by the Ophites (Hippol. Hæc. v. 7), by the Pseudo-Clement of Rome (Epist. 2, § 12), by Cassianus (Clem. Alex. l. c.), and by Theodotus (Clem. Alex. p. 985). Comp. also the remarks of Clement of Alexandria himself, pp. 532, 539 sq., besides the passage first cited. See the note on Clem. Rom. l. c. For another coincidence of St Paul's language with a saying attributed to our Lord, but not found in the Gospels, see 1 Thess. v. 21.

εἰς ἐστὲ] 'are one man.' Comp. Ephes. ii. 15 τοὺς δύο κτίση ἐν ἑαυτῷ εἰς ἓνα καὶ ἓν ἄνθρωπον, and Justin Dial. § 116, p. 344 B οὕτως ἡμεῖς οἱ διὰ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ ὀνόματος ὡς εἰς ἄνθρωπος πιστεύσαντες... τὰ ῥήματα ἱμάτια ἀπημφισμένοι κ.τ.λ., which seems to be a reminiscence of this passage of St Paul. The neuter ἐν, found in some texts, destroys the point of the expression, the oneness as a conscious agent.

29. Χριστοῦ] 'are part of Christ, are members of Christ,' not merely
