 Monster in Ireland. This suppliant Donoghe O'Byrn, a subject of that realme, whoe hathe ben recommended unto us by Mr. Topclyffe (a gentleman well knowne to your Lordship) for his good service donn here within this realme, hathe enformed us that in the tyme of his aboade here performynge many dangerous services (as wee are given to understand) to his great hazard, two gentlemen his neighbours of that nation, the one called Gerrard Fitz James and the other Tyrreloughe O'Bryen, encrocheth dailie uppon a freeholde, beinge a small porcion of land dyscendinge by inherytaunce unto him from his father, deceased, the which (as he alledgeth) his auncestors tyme out of mynde have quietlie enjoyed. We have therefore thought good for thes respectes, and for the good service that his father did in the late rebellyon of the Erle of Desmond, where he was maymed in her Majesty's service and he and his followers spoiled by the enemy of all theire goodes and substaunce to theire utter undoinge, to praie and require your Lordship and the rest to examine these his greefes and challendge of tytle, wherein (as he alledgeth) he and his mother are troubled and molested, and uppon the hearinge and examynation of all these causes and his tytle (yf his suggestions shall fall dylie out as he enformeth) to tak soche course for his releefe and quiett as shalbe agreeable to equitie and justice.

their charters and auneyent customes, but divers pryviledges and immunityties. Because her Majestie dothe not willinglie give eare to these kinde of suites unles they bring recom-mendacion from thence from your Lordship and the State, we have thought good to remytt them unto you, prayinge you to consider of their demaundes and what you shall thinck meete to be graunted unto them. Neverthelesse we thinck yt meete they maie enjoye their auneyent customes, and where they do enforme us that there are divers persons that doe dailie molest them in seekinge of concealementes to their greate hurte and prejudice, their humble suite in those cases is (yf anie concealment be at any tyme founde against them) that they maie have the preferment of the same before anie other, satysfyinge her Majestie for the same as yt shalbe rated or as you shall thincke convenient, which their suite seemynge reasonable unto us, wee praie your Lordship and the rest they maie therein be favored and preferred.

priest's wife.

A letter to the Lord Deputie of Ireland. Whereas Margaret Lennard, the wyfe of Sir Dennys O'Raghan, hath enformed us that by reason of her marryage unto him she hath ben hardlie dealt withall by the cheefe officer of the towne of Newe Rosse and put besides her freedom, with divers other injurys she hath receaved of them, wee have thought therefore to praie your Lordship to give speciall order and direction unto Sir Patryck Welsh, Mr. Driver, Mr. Roche and Mr. Soveraine, the cheefe officers of that towne, not onlie to restore her to her freedome, whereby she maie use anie trade that a free man or woman ought or maie do (as heretofore she did), but to have a speciall care that she be not injuried, threatned, molested or troubled, but to be used with all favour and curtesie.

Troubles in Anglesey

Whereas certaine causes betweene Sir Richard Bulkley, knight, and Owen Wood, esquire, were referred to be considered by Mr. Wolley, Chauncellour of the Order of the Garter, and Mr. Fortescue, Chauncellour of the Exchequer, which this daie made reporte to their Lordships that the informacions given by Sir Richard Bulkley and the other Deputie Lieutenantes of Anglesey against Owen Woode was for that he did use divers kinds of unreverent speeches in myslykinge the traynyng of soldiers and reducinge of them into bandes under captens, and by the confession of Woode in his owne answers (yt shuld seeme) that he had used very indyscreet speeches in that behalfe, their Lordships therefore thought yt meete he shuld no longer be continewed in the Commyssion of Peace in those partes. Where on th'other side Owen Wood dothe complaine that Sir Richard Bulkley did bringe his action of the case against him for certaine wordes spoken by him against Sir Richard, and (as he did informe) Sir Richard did enforce by his learned councell those causes that were (longe sithence) brought before their Lordships against Sir Richard, contrary to an order sett downe by their Lordships, and so he recovered greate damages to the somme of eight hundreth poundes. Because Sir Richard did shewe unto their Lordships, and Woode him selfe doth not deny, that the action of the case brought against Wood was, by his declaracion, for other sclaunderous wordes spoken longe sithence the order sett downe by their Lordships, and not for the wordes before reported afore the Councell, which were now uppon Sir Richard's action and declaracion justyfyed by the pleadinges of Woode, their Lordships see no cause to deale with the said Sir Richard to myttygate that somme which by due course of lawe he hath obtayned. Nevertheles because Owen Woode was brought before their Lordships by warraunt, it ys ordered that neither Sir Richard nor a servaunt of his p. 432. named Gryffeth Porter, nor anie other by Sir Richard's meanes shall serve anie execucion or have anie action against the said Woode for the space of twelve daies next insuyng the date hereof, in which tyme he maie repaire into his contry or whether he shall els thincke good.

A letter to the Erle of Pembroke, Lord President of the Marches of Wales, and to the rest of the Councell there. Where by the attainder of Sir Francis Englefeild, knight,

Sir F.
Englefield's ands given to Lord Essex.

of Highe Treason the landes of the said Sir Francis are actuallie vested in the Queene's Majestie, whereof her Majestie graunted sondry parcelles thereof to the use of our very good Lord the Erle of Essex, and by a late judgment given in the Exchequer uppon greate and longe delyberacion had, after the cause was fullie debated as well by the learned councell on both sides as also by the Lord Cheefe Baron and other Barons of the same Court, a lease made by her Majestie to Foster and Fytton was adjudged voide, and her Majestie and the Erle in her Majesty's right were put in possession of as moche landes as laie in the countie of Barkshire, where the greatest parte of the said landes doe lye. For as moche as wee are nowe given to understand that Francis Englefeild, nephewe to the said Sir Frauncis, hathe confederated him selfe with sondrie the tenants of parcell of the same landes in the county of Salopp contayned in the said lease so adjudged voide, to dysturbe the possession not onlie of the said Erle and his assignes in soche parcell of the landes as are assigned to him, and under cullour of the said lease adjudged voide the said Frauncis Englefeild receaveth the rentes and all other proffittes whatsoever of the said landes and the same detayneth from the Erle and his assignes, contrary to all equitie and justice, and the occupiers of the same landes attend uppon the said Francis Englefeild as uppon their very lorde, intendinge not onlie, as wee are informed, the dysherison of the Queene's Majestie but also of the Erle and his assignes. These are therefore to require your Lordship and the rest to take soche order that, according to the judgment given in the behalfe of her Majestie, the possession of so much as ys conveyed to the Erle maie be settled, quietted and contynued in his Lordship and his assignes accordinge to justice, and to see them mainteyned in the same in her Majesty's right as they ought to be. Wherein wee praie you from tyme to tyme (as occasion shall serve) they maie have your assystaunce, favour and helpe.
