are become unfaithfull vnto the LORDE, must all together be utterly destroyed.

And excepte ye be ashamed of the oke-trees wherin ye haue so delited, and of the gardes that ye haue chosen: ye shalbe as an oke whose leaues are fallen awaye, and as a garden that hath no moystnesse. And as for the glory of these thinges, it shalbe turned to due strawe, and he that made them to a sparke. And they shal both burne together, so that no man shalbe able to quench them.

The seconde Chapter.

Worouer this is the worde that was epened vnto Esaye the sonne of Amos, vpon Juda and Jerusalem. It will be also in processe of tyme: That the hill where the house of the LORDE is buylded, shal be y chese amonge hilles, and exalted aboue all li-le hilles. And al heithē shal prease vnto him and the multitude of people shal go vnto him, speakinge thus one to another: vp, let us go to the hill of the LORDE, and to the house of y God of Jacob: y he maye shewe us his waye, and y we maye walke in his pathes. For y lawe shal come out of Syon, and the worde of God from Jerusalem, and shal geue sentence amonge the heithen, and shal reforme the multitude of people: So that they shal breake their swerdes and spea-res, to make scythes, cycles, and sawes therof.

From that tyme forth shal not one people lift vp wapen agaynst another, nether shal they lerne to fight from thensforth. It is to the that I crie (o house of Jacob) vp, let us walke in the light of the LORDE. But thou art scatred abroad with thy people (o house of Jacob) for ye go farre beyonde yo fathers, whether it be in Sorcerers whem ye haue as the phylistynes had) or in calkers of mens byrthes, wherof ye haue to many. As soone as youre londe was ful of syluer and golde, and no ende of youre treasure: so soone as youre londe was ful of stron-ge horses and no ende of youre charrettes: Inmediatly was it ful of Idols also, euen workes of youre owne hondes, which ye you re selues haue facioned, and youre fyngers haue made. There kneleth the man, there falleth the man downe before them, so y thou canst not bunge him awaye from thence.

And therfore get y soone in to some rock, and hyde the in the grounde from the sight of the fearful iudge, and from y glory of his Magesstie. Which casteth downe y high lokes of presumptuous personnes, and bryn-geth lowe the pryde of mā, and he only shal be exalted in y daye. For the daye of y LOR DE of hostes shal go ouer all pryde, and presumptio, vpon all thē that exalte the selues, and shal bunge them all downe: vpon all high stoute Cedie trees of Libanus, and vpon all the okes of Basan, vpon all high hilles, and vpon all stoute mountaynes, vpon all cossy towres, and vpon all stronge walles, vpon all shippes of the see, and vpon euery thinge y is glorious and pleasant to lōke vpon.

And it shal bunge downe the pryde of man, and laye mans presumptuousnesse full lowe, and the LORDE shal only haue the tory in that daye. But the Idols shal utterly be rotted out. Men shal crepe in to holes of stene, and in to canes of the earth, from the sight of the fearfull iudge, and from the glory of his magesstie: what tyme as he shal make him vp to shake the earth. Then, the shal ma cast awaye his goddes of syluer and golde (which he neuertheles had made to ho-noure the) vnto Molles and Baetes: the he maye the better crepe in to the canes and rockes, and in to the cliffes of hard stones, from y sight of the fearful iudge and from the glory of his Magesstie.

The thirde Chapter.

Every man can eschue a persone moued in Langer, for what doth he wysely? Euen so shal y LORDE of hostes take awaye fro y rusale z Juda, all possessiōs z power, all meat and dunke, y captaigne and the souldier, y iudge and the prophete, the wyse and the aged mā, the worshipful of siftrie yeare old, and the honorable: the Senatours, and mā of vnderstandinge: the masters of craftes and oratours. And I shal geue you childen to be youre prynces (saith the LORDE) and babes shal haue the rule of you. One shal euer be doinge violence and wronge to an-ther. The boye shal presume agaynst the elder, and the vyle persone agaynst the honorable. Yee one shal take a frende of his owne kynred by y bosome, and saye: thou hast done this thinge, thou shalt be oure heade, for thou mayest kepe us from this fall and perrell.

Then shal he sweare and saye: I can not helpe you. Morouer, there is nether meaner clothinge in my house, make me no reuer-ler of the people. For Jerusalem and Juda must decaye, because that both their wodes and counsels are agaynst the LORDE. they prouoke the presence of his magesstie to anger. The chaunginge of their counsaunce bewrayeth them, yee they declare their owne synnes themselves, as the SOD mites, z hyde the not. Wo be vnto their son-les, for they shalbe heuely rewarded. Then shal they saye: O happy are the godly, for they maye enioye the frutes of their studies.

But wo be to y vngodly and vnrightrous for they shalbe rewarded after their wortes. O my people, rybaundes oppresse y, and women haue rule of the.

O my people, thy leders beceane the, and trade out the waye of thy footsteppes.
The LORDE is here to comon of the matter, and stonde to geue iudgment with the people. The LORDE shal come forth to reason with the Senatours and prynces of his people, and shal saye thus vnto them: It is ye that haue burnt vp my vnyearde, the robbery of the poore is in youre house. Wherfore do ye oppresse my people, and marre y faces of the innocentes? thus shal the God of hostes reuyle them.

Morouer thus saith y LORDE: Seinge the daughters of Sion are become so prou-de, and come in with stretched out neckes, and with vayne wanton eyes: seinge they come in trippinge so nycely with their feet: Therfore shal the LORDE shane the heades of the daughters of Sion, and make their bawie bare in that daye. In that daye shal the LORDE take awaye the gorgeousnes of their apparel, and spanges, cheynes, partlettes, and colares, braceletes and hoores, y goodly floured, wyde and broderd raymēt, busshes and headbandes, rynges and garlandes, holy daye clothes and vales, kerch-ues and pynnes, glasses and smockes, bonet-tes and taches.

And in steade of good smell there shalbe stynck amonge them. And for their gyddles there shalbe lowse bondes. And for welset haye there shalbe baldnesse. In steade of a stomacher, a sack cloth, and for their bewty wythrednesse and sonneburnyng. Their husbondes and their mightie men shal perish with the swerde in batell.

The fourth Chapter.

It that tyme shal their gates mourne and complayne, and they shal sit as desolate folck vpon the earth. Then shal seuen wyues take holde of one man, and saye: we will laye all oure meat and cloothinge together in comon, only that we maye be called thy wyues, and that this shamefull reprose maye be take from us. After that tyme shal the braunch of y LORDE be bentiful and mightie, and y frute of the earth shal-be saye and pleasant for those Israelites that shal spunge therof. Then shal the remnant in Sion and the remnant at Jerusalem be called holy: namely all soch as are witten amonge the luynges at Jerusalem: what tyme as the LORDE shal wash awaye the desolacion of the doughters of Sio, and poure the bloude out from Jerusalem, w y wynde of his smoke and fyre.

Morouer vpon all the dwellinges of the hill of Sion and vpon their whole congregacion, shal the LORDE proude a cloude and smoke by daye, and the shynynge of a flammyng fyre by night, for all their glory shalbe preserved. And Jerusalem shal be a tabernacle for a shadowe because of herte in the daye tyme, a place and refuge where a man maye kepe him for wether and rayne.

The V. Chapter

Well than, I will synge my beloued frende a songe of his vnyearde. A My beloued frende hath a vnyearde in a very frutefull plenteous grounde. This he hedged, this he walled rounde aboute, and planted it with goodly grapes. In the myddest of it buylded he a towre, and made a wyne presse therin. And afterwarde when he looked y it shulde bunge him grapes, it brought forth thornes. I shewe you now my cause (o ye Citysens of Jerusalem and whole Juda:) I praye you betwixte me: and my wynegarding. What more coude haue bene done for it, that I haue not done? Wherfore then hath it geuen thornes, where I looked to haue had grapes of it?

Well, I shall tell you how I will do w my vnyarde: I will take the hedge from it, that it maye perish, and breake downe y wall, that it maye be troden vnder fore. I will laye it waist, that it shal nether be twysed nor cut, but beare thornes and bieares. I wil also forbyd y cloude, that they shal not rayne vpon it. As for the vnyarde of the LORDE of hostes it is the house of Israel, and whole Juda his sayre plantin-ge. Of these he looked forequyte, but se there is wronge: for rightuousnesse, lo, It is but misyry.

Wo to you that idoyne one house to another, and bunge one londe so nigh vnto another, till ye can get no more grounde. Wil ye dwell vpon the earth alone? The LORDE of hostes rowneth me thus in myne eares: shal not many greater and more gorgeous houses be so waist, that no man shal dwell in the? And ten akers of vynes shal geue but a Quarte, and xxx. bushels of sedge shal geue but thre.

The prophet Esay.

Wo be vnto them that ryse vp early to vse them selues in diontynges, and yet at night are more superfluous with wyne. In whose companies are harpes and lutes, tabrettes and pipes, and wyne. But they regard not the worke of the LORDE, and consider not the operaciō of his hondes. Therefore cometh my folck also in captiuyte, because they haue no vnderstandyng. Their glory shalbe mytte with hūger, and their pryde shalbe marred for thurst. Therefore gaperth hel, and openeth hyr mouth marvelous wyde: that pryde, boostinge and wisdom, with such as reioyse therein, maye descende in to it.

Thus shal man haue a fall, he shalbe brought lowe, and the high lokes of the proude layde downe. But the LORDE of hostes, y holy God: shalbe exalted and vntouched, when he shal declare his equityte and righteuousnesse after this maner. Then shal y lambes cate their apoynted feder, and shal fede plenteously in the mountaynes. Wo vnto vayne persones, that drawe wickednes vnto the, as it were with a corde: and synne, as it were with a cart rope. Which vse to speake on this maner: let h m make haist now, and go forth w his worke, that we maye se it. Let the counceyl of y holy one of Israel come, and drawe me, y we maye knowe it.

Wo vnto them that call euil good, and good euil: which make darcknes light, and light darcknesse, y make sower swete, and swete sower. Wo vnto them that are wise in their owne sight, and thinke them selues to haue vnderstandyng. Wo vnto them, y are counyngte men to suppe out wyne, and experte to set vp dycknesse. These gyue sentence with the vngodly for rewardes, but condemne the iust cause of the righteuous.

Therefore, like as fyre licketh vp the strawe, and as the flame cōsumeth the stubble: Euen so (when their root is ful) their blossom shal vanishe awaye like dust or smoke for they despyse the lawe of the LORDE of hostes, and blasphemie the worde of the holy maker of Israel.

Therefore is the wrath of the LORDE kindled also agaynst his people, and he shal keth his honde at them: yee he shal smyte so, that the hilles shal tremble. And their carcasses shal lye in the open stretes, like myre. After all this, the wrath of God shal not cease, but he shal stretch his hōde wyder. And he shal gyue a tokē vnto a straunge people, and call vnto them in a farr countrie: and beholde, they shal come hastily with spede. There is not one saynt nor feble amonge them, no not a slothful nor sleepy parson. There shal not one of them put of the gyrdle from his loynes, nor lose the lacher of his shue. Their arrows are sharpe, and their bowes bent. Their horse hoes are like flynt, and their cartwheles like a stormy wynde. Their crie is as it were of a lyon, and the roaringe of them like lyons helpe. They shal roare, and hatch vp the praye, and no man shal recover it or get it from the. In that daye they shal be so scarce vpon them, as the see. And yf n e lte vnto the londe, beholde, it shalbe all darcknesse and sorowe. Yf we lte to be anen: beholde, it shalbe darck with careful desperation.

The vii Chapter.

In the same yere y kynge Oshas dyed, y Iane the LORDE sittynge vpon an high and gloriouse seate, and his trayne fylled y palace. From aboue flakred the Seraphims, n herof euery one had sex wynges. With twayne ech couered his face, w twayne his fete, and with twayne dyd he flye. They cried also ech one to other on this maner: holy, holy, holy is the LORDE of hostes. The whole world is ful of his glory. See the geastes and dorechekes moued at the criege, and the horse was ful of smoke. Then I sayde: Who is me. For I nas a slouish: that I (which am a man of vncleppes, and dwell amonge people y hath vncleppes also: Shulde y y kynge and LORDE of hostes with my ne eyes.

Then fletwe one of the Seraphims vnto me, hauinge a hote cole in his honde, n hich he had taken from the auter with the tonges, and touched my mouth, and sayde: lo, this hath touched thy mouth, n thy vrighteousnes is taken awaye, and thy synne forgiven. After this I herde the voyce of the LORDE takinge aduysment on this maner: Whem shal I sende, and who wilke cure messanger? The I sayde: here am I, sende me. And so he sayde: go, and tel this people: ye shall heare in deede, but ye shal not vnderstande, ye shal plainly se, and not perceaue. Hard en the hart of this people, stoppe their eares, and shut their eyes, that they se not w their eyes, heare not with their eares, and vnderstande not with their hartes, and conuerte and be healed.

Then spake I: LORDE, how longe shall swere: vntil the cities be utterly without inhabitours, and y houses without men, till the lōde be also desolate, and lye vnbuylded. For the LORDE shal take the men far awaye, so that the londe shal lye wast. Nevertheless, the tenth parte shal remayne therein, for it shal conuerte and be frute ful. And likewise as the Terebintes and Okerrees bunge forth their frutes, so shal the holy fede haue frute.

The seuenth Chapter.

It happened in the tyme of Ahas the sonne of Ionathas, which was the sonne of Joathan kynge of Iuda: that Rezin the kynge of Siria, and Poca Rome lies sonne, kynge of Israel: wente vp to ward Jerusalem to beseye it (but wame it not). Now when the house of Dauid (that is Ahas) herde worde therof, y Siria and Ephraim were confederate together: his herre quated (yee and y herres also of his people) like as a tre in the felde, that is moued with the wynde.

Then sayde God vnto Esay: go mete Ahas (thou and thy sonne Sear Jasub) at the heade of y ouer pole, in the fore path by the fullers grounde, and saye vnto him: take hede to thyself and be still, but feare not, nether be saynt harted, for these two tales: that is: for these two smokynge fyre brandes, the wrath and furiousnes of Rezin the Sirian and Rome lies sonne: because that the kynge of Siria Ephraim and Rome lies sonne haue wickedly conspyred agaynst the, sayenge: We will go downe in to Iuda, vnto the, and bringe them vnder vs, and set a kynge there. euen the sonne of Taball. For thus saith the LORDE God thereto, It shall not so go forth, nether come so to passe: for the head of y Sirians is Damascus, but the head of Damascus is Rezin. And after fyue and threescore yere, shal Ephraim be nomore a people. And the chiefe cite of Ephraim is Samaria, but the head of Samaria is Rome lies sonne. And yf ye beleue not, there shall no promyse be kepte with you.

Moreover, God spake vnto Ahas, sayenge: requyre a token of the LORDE thy God, whether it be towarde the depty beneath or towarde y hight aboue. The sayde Ahas: I will requyre none, nether will I tempte the LORDE. The LORDE answered: Then heare to, ye of the house of Dauid: Is it not ynough for you, that ye be greuous vnto men, but ye must greue my God also? And therefore the LORDE shal geue you a token of himself: Beholde, a virgin shal conceaue and beare a sonne, and shal call his name Emanuel. But ter and hony shal he eate, y he maye knowe the enel, and chose y good. But ouer that childe come to knowlege, re eschue the enel and chose the good: The londe (that thou art so afraide for) shalbe deplorate of both hir kynges.

The LORDE also shal sende a tyme vpon the, vpon thy people, and vnto thy fathers house (soch as neuer came sence the tyme y Ephraim departed from Iuda) thore w y kynge of the Assirians. For at the same tyme shal the LORDE whyle for the flyes y are aboute the water of Egypte, and for y Beyes in the Assirians londe. These shall come, and shal light all in the valeyes, in y vountes of stone, vpon all grene thynges, and in all corners.

At the same tyme shal the LORDE shene the hayre of the heade and the fete and the beard cleue of, with the rasoure that he shal paye them withall beyonde the water: namely, with y kynge of the Assirians. At the same tyme shal a man lye with a corwe, and two shepe. Then because of the aboundaunce of mylk, he shal make butter and eat it. So that euery one which remaineth in the londe, shal eate butter and hony. At the same tyme all vynyardes (though there be a thousand vynes in one, and were solde for a thousand siluer linges) shalbe turned to briers and thornes. Like as they shal come in to the londe with arrows and bowes, so shal all the londe become briers and thornes. And as for all hilles that now are hewen downe, thou shalt not come vnto them, for feare of briers and thornes. But the catel shal be dryuen thither, and the shepe shal fede there.

The viii Chapter.

Where the LORDE sayde vnto me: Take the a greate leaf, and wryte in it, as men do with a penne, that he spede him to robbe, and haist him to spoyle. And Immediately I called vnto me faithful wytnesses: Oshas the prest, and Zacharias y sonne of Barachias. After that went I vnto the prophetisse, that now had conceaue and borne a sonne. Then sayde the LORDE to me: geue him this name: Maher schal hafchbas, that is: a speedie robber, an hastie spoyle. For why, ouer the childe shal haue knowlege to saye: Abi and Im, y is father, and mother: shal y riches of Damascus and y substance of Samaria be take awaye, thore w the kynge of y Assirians.

B The LORDE spake also unto me, sayenge: for so moch as the people refuseth the stillrenninge water of Silo, and put their delite in Rezin and Remelies sonne. Beholde, the LORDE shal bring mightie and great flondes of water vpon them: namely, yf kynges of the Assirians with all his power.
Which shall poure out his fury vnto euery man, and renne ouer all their bankes.
And shal breake in vpon Iuda, increasynge in power, till he get him by the throte. He shal fyl also the wydenesse of thy londe wth his brode wynges, O Emanuel. Go together ye people, and gather you, hearken to all ye of farre countrees. Mustre you, and gather you: mustre you and gather you, take youre counsel together, yet must youre counsel come to nought: go in honde withal, yet shal it not prospere. Excepte Emanuel: (that is God) be with us. For the LORDE chastised me, and tete me by yf hon-de, and warned me, sayenge vnto me: that I shulde not walke in the waye of this peple. He sayde morouer: rounde with none of the, who so euer saye: yonder people are bounde together. Neuertheles feare them not, nether be a frayde of them, but sanctifie the LORDE of hoostes, let him be youre feare and drede. For he is the sanctifieng-e, and stone to stomble at, yf rock to fall vpon, a snare and net to both the houses: to Irael, and the inhabitours of Ierusalem. And many shal stomble, fall, and be broke vpon him: yet they shal be snared and taken.

D Now laye the witness together (sayde the LORDE) and scale the lawe with my disciples. Thus I waite vpon the LORDE, that hath turned his face from the house of Jacob, and I loke vnto him. But lo, as forme, and the children which the LORDE hath geuen me: we are a token and a wondre in Irael, for the LORDE of hoostes sake, which dwelleth vpon the hill of Syon.

And therfore yf they saye vnto you: aske counsel at the soothsayers, with es, charmers and conurers, then make them this answere: Is there a people enywhere, that aseth not counsel at his God: whether it be concernynge the dead, or the lyuynge?
Yf eny man want light, let him loke vpon the lawe and the testimony, whether they speake not after this meanynge. Yf he do not this, he stombleth and suffreth hunger.
And yf he suffreth hunger, he is out of pacience, and blasphemeth his kyng and his God. Then loke he vpwarde, and dow-ne warde to the earth, and beholde, there

Well sene, that yf londe of Zabulon and the londe of Nephtali (where thorow the see waye goeth ouer Jordane in to the londe of Galilee) was at the first in litle trouble, but afterward sore vexed.

Neuertheles yf people that haue dwelt in darcknesse, shal see a greate light. As for them that dwell in the londe of the shade of death, vpon them shal the light shyne.
Shalt thou multiplie the people, and not increase the ioye also? They shal reioyse before the euen as men make mery in haruest, and as men that haue gotten the victory, when they deale the spoyle. For thou shalt breake the yocke of the peoples burthen: the staff of hys shulder, and the rod of his oppresseure, as in yf daye at Madian.

Morouer all temerarious and sedicious power (ye where there is but a core fylde wth bloude) shal be burnt, and fede the fyre.
For vnto us a childe shal be borne, and vnto us a sonne shal be geue. Vpon his shulder shal the kyngdome lye, and he shal be called wth his owne name: The wonderous gener of counsel, the mightie God, the everlastinge father, the prynce of peace, he shal make an ende to encrease the kyngdome and peace, and shal sit vpon the seate of David and in his kyngdome, to set vp the same, to sta-blishe it with equyte and righteounesse, from thence forth for evermore. This shal the gelousy of the LORDE of hoostes bringe to passe.

The LORDE sent a worde in to Jacob, the same is come in to Irael. All the people also of Ephraim, and they that dwell in Samaria, can saye with pryde and hie ste-maces, on this maner: The tyle worde is fallen downe, but we will buylde it with harder stones. The Molbery tymbre ys bo-ten, but we shal set it vp agayne with Cedre. Neuertheles, the LORDE shal prepare Rezin the enemye agaynst the, and so odre their aduersaries, that yf Surians shal laye holde vpon them before, and the philis-tynes behynde, and so denure Irael with open mouth.

After all this, the wrath of the LORDE shal not cease, but yet his hande shal be stretched out still. For the people turneth not vnto him, that chastiseth them, nether do they seke the LORDE of hoostes. Therfore the LORDE shal rote out of Irael both heade and tale, braunch and twygge in one daye. By the heade, is vnderstonde the Senatoure and honorable man, and by yf tale, the prophet that preacheth lyes. For all they which enfourme the people that they be in a right case, soch be disceainers.

Soch as men thynke also to be perfecte amonge these, are but cast awaye.

Therfore shal the LORDE haue no pleasure in their yonge me, nether fauoure their fatherlesse and wydowes. For they are altogether ypocrites and wicked, and all their mouthes speake fely. After all this shal not the LORDEs wrath cease, but yet his honde shal be stretched out still. For the ragodly burne, as a fyre in the briers and thornes: And as it were out of a fyre in a wood or a redbush, so ascendeth the smoke of their pryde.

For this cause shal yf wrath of the LOR-DE of hoostes fall vpon the londe, and the people shal be consumed, as it were with fy-re, no man shal spare his brother. Yf a man do turne him to the right honde, he shal famish, or to the lefte hande to eat, he shal not haue ynough. Euery man shal eat the flesh of his owne arme: Manasses shal ea-te Ephraim, and Ephraim Manasses, and they both shal eat Iuda. After all this shal not the LORDEs wrath cease, but yet shal his honde be stretched out still.

The tenth chapter.

Woe be vnto you yf make vnrightheous lawes, and devyse thinges, which be to harde for to kepe: wherthorow the poore are oppressed, on enery syde, and the in-nocentes of my people are there with robbed of iudgment: that wydowes maye be your praye, and that ye maye robbe the fatherlesse. What will ye do in tyme of the visitation and destruction, that shal come from farre: To whom will ye reune for helpe: or to whom will ye geue youre honoure, that he maye kepe it: that ye come not amonge the prisoners, or lye amonge the dead? After all this shal not the wrath of the LORDE cease, but yet shal his honde be stretched out still.

Woe be also vnto Assur, which is a staff of my wrath, in whose honde is the rod of my punnyshment. For I shal sende him amonge those ypocritish poeple, amonge the people that haue deserued my disfauour: I shal sende him: that he maye utterly robbe them, spoyle them, and treade them downe like the myre in the strete. Howbeit his meanynge is not so, nether thinketh his harte of this fashion. But he ymagineth only, how he maye ouerthrowe and destroye moch people, for he saith: are not my princes all kynges? Is not Calno as ea-sie to wyne, as Charchamis? Is it harder to conquere Antiochia then Arphad? Or is it lighter to ouercome Damascus the Samaria? As who say: I were able to wyne the kyngdome of the Idolaters and their goddess, but not Ierusalem and Samaria.

Shal I not do vnto Ierusalem and their ymages, as I dyd vnto Samaria and the ir ymages?

Wherfore the LORDE saith: As soone as I haue perfourmed my whole worke vpon the hyl of Syon and Ierusalem: the will I also vyset the noble and stoute kyng of Assiria, with his wysdome and pry-de. For he stendeth thus in his owne coceate: This do I, thorow the power of myne owne honde, and thorow my wysdome: For I am wyse, I am he that remoue the lon-des of the people, I robbe their prynces: and (like one of the worthies) I dryue them from their hie seates. My honde hath foun-de out the hoostes of the people, as it were a nest. And like as egges, that were lay-de here and there, are gathered together: So do I gather all countrees. And there is no man, yf darre be so bolde, as to touch a fether, that darre open his mouth, or once whisper.

But doth the are boost itself, agaynst him yf heweth therewith, or doth the sawe make eny krakinge, agaynst him that rinleth it? That were euen like, as yf the red dyderalte it self agaynst him, that beareth it: or as though yf staff shulde magnifie it self, as who saye: it were no woodd. Therfore shal the LORDE of hoostes sende him po-uerie in his riches, and burne vp his power, as it were with a fyre. But the light of Irael shal be yf fyre, and his Sanctuary shal be the flame, and it shal kyndle, and burne vp his thornes and briers in one daye, yee all the glory of his woddes and felde shal be consumed with body and soule. As for himself, he shal be as one chased awaye. The trees also of his felde shal be of soch a nombre, that a childe maye tell them.

After yf daye shal the remnant of Irael, and soch as are escaped out of the house of Jacob, seke no more coforte at him that smote them, but shal comforte themselves with faithfulness and treuth in the LOR-
